MILK LAW AFFECTS BUT FEW FARMERS

Only Those Delivering Raw Product Here Would Have to Test Cows.

Farmers' fears of adoption of an unfair milk ordinance here were allayed to some extent by the board of health at its public meeting in the city hall last night. Farmers' representatives who attended—C. E. Culver and R. T. Glasco, county agent—were assured that it is not the intent of the board to work a hardship on the milk producers. It was pointed out that the request the board will make to the council in the proposed ordinance is the ruling that all milk delivered to the city hall must be from cows which have been tested. This will not affect the producers who deliver their milk to local distributing plants, as milk to local distributors is pasteurized and clean handling of milk form full protection against the spread of disease.

Health board members are expected to appear before the council in its regular meeting Monday night to discuss the terms of the proposed ordinance regulating the sale and distribution of all milk in Janesville.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS OCCUR AT TOMB OF UNKNOWN SOLDIER

London.—Scores of touching incidents have been witnessed at the tomb of the "Unknown Warrior" in Westminster Abbey as long lines of men, women and children have passed the black marble slab covering the grave of a dead soldier since the burial there of the unidentified soldier.

The fact that no one knows the name of the man who lies beneath the slab leads many to other tributes in the hope perhaps that the body is that of a missing son. The mother of one of the thousands of unknown warriors, who one day might be recognized in Westminster Abbey, laid three war medals, the Mons Star, the Victory Medal, and the British War Medal on the grave. She passed in the line. They had been awarded to her only son, who was wounded three times and afterwards reported missing.

A soldier's modest offering of flowers bore the inscription: "I love my country, my two pals and all the other pals."

The epitaph placed on the slab reads: "For King and Country—Greater Love Hath No Man Than This."

RED CROSS SEEKS JOB FOR WAR VET

Miss Hattie Allen, secretary of the Red Cross office here, is looking for work for a veteran of the world war who has been out of work for three weeks. His home is in the northern part of the state. Anyone who would help or any description is requested to call the office in the postoffice.

Appleton.—There will be no reduction in wages of carpenters, bricklayers and masons in the Fox River valley, unless there is a decided drop in the cost of living, it was decided at a meeting of contractors.

Washington.—Evidence as to coal prices paid in 1920 by the war department has been referred to the department of justice with a recommendation for action.

Washington.—An unanimous favorable report was ordered by the senate military committee on the resolution of Senator New, republican, Indiana, directing the secretary of war to stop army enlistments until the number of enlisted men is reduced to 175,000.

Washington.—France has informally notified the U. S. of the contemplated invasion of the Ruhr valley by German troops, who would be accompanied by a German government to effect a disarmament there. Ultimate action of the U. S. is indefinite.

Traverse City, Mich.—Death of two women and injuries to several persons resulted from the destruction by fire of a five story apartment building.

25 MORE ENROLL IN NIGHT SCHOOL WHEN NEW TERM IS BEGUN

Night school at the vocational and high school buildings opened second semester work last night following the Christmas holidays, and 25 new pupils were enrolled. It is expected that a similar number of entrants will be secured next Tuesday as many notified Supt. J. M. Dorrans that they wished to enroll, but were unable to attend the session Thursday night.

The night school attendance has been unusually good during the first semester. The attendance being between 85 and 90 per cent according to Mr. Dorrans. The evening school has had the largest classes this year since its establishment. It was somewhat affected by the influenza epidemic, but all the classes are well patronized. The mechanical line for the men and the dressmaking classes for the women are especially popular. About 250 men and women were enrolled during the last semester, and it is expected that this attendance will be maintained during the semester just started.

U. B. BISHOP TO BE IN CITY SUNDAY

Decholt, who is the superintendent of the Wisconsin conference, are making a tour of the churches in the interest of a campaign for the establishment of a mission at Reedsburg.

MAYOR TALKS TO 200 AT BANQUET IN EAGLE'S HALL

Featured by an address on fraternalism by Mayor T. E. Welsh, 260 Eagles and their wives and friends enjoyed a banquet and dance at their hall last evening. The Ladies' auxiliary served the dinner. "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and another number were sung. Thomas McKelvey.

Mayor Welsh, in his address, advised all members to live as close as possible to their obligations and to understand each other. Following his talk, a carillon was played on the organ by the auxiliary president with this toast:

"This little token we give you today,
"May it drive all your troubles and sorrows away."
"For trouble are many and few are your friends."
"When you wear this remembrance, we're yours to the end."

DELAY ACTION ON SITE FOR PAVILION

Postponement of action on the proposed site on Pleasant street for a cattle feeding pavilion was taken today at a meeting of the joint committee of the breeders and the Chamber of Commerce held at the Chamber of Commerce hotel at 10 o'clock. The offer of the owner of the property, a Chicago man, through his attorney P. J. E. Wood, to dispose of the property for $7,000 was considered too high, according to a statement made at the Chamber. It was not turned down, however, and will be taken up at the next meeting of the committee, the date of which has not been set.

TEACHERS ENTERTAINED

Teachers of the public schools met at the afternoon school late yesterday afternoon and were entertained by the children of the school under the direction of Miss Cady, principal. Talks were made by several teachers.

IOWA IS LEADER IN DEVELOPMENT OF STATE PARKS

Des Moines, Ia.,—Iowa has achieved such remarkable results in state park creation and development that the first National Conference on Parks is to be held here January 10-12 under joint auspices of the Department of the Interior and the State of Iowa. Experts from every state will be present to discuss park problems and incidentally to learn how Iowa has been able to do so much.

Seven out of every one hundred acres in Iowa are capable of cultivation, according to official statistics, leaving only three per cent of parkable land. About three per cent of the state is covered by the Iowa National Forest. The Indian mounds, for instance, reveal a number of prehistoric ruins which are of great value to the United States what the pyramids are to Egypt, relics of an ancient civilization. About fifty of the mounds are within state limits and others are included in the parks to be laid out in the future. Some of them have been despoiled for their treasures of pottery, beads and flint implements, but many remain intact and officials of the Iowa Historical Department hope some day to have an adequate collection of the utensils which the first Americans used in the early days of their life.

The tea caves of Iowa are another interesting part of its park system. They owe their existence, probably, to the prehistoric races which once covered the territory. For they are found in limestone regions, where the rock is porous. In the winter these caves store up cold air. When summer comes and the cold air begins to grow warm, the impulse of a burning sun, the frigid air escapes slowly, cooling the mouth of the caves with mine and hour-frost.

These caves in turn give rise to one of the most interesting botanical phenomena of this country—the survival in Iowa of trees and flowers that have their normal range far to the north. While Iowa saves the temperature of the soil on the rocks near the caves remains at 56 to 58 degrees and there frequently grow the balsam fir, of the north woods and the white pine, of the growth of the mountains. In Iowa parks may be seen the most southern distribution of white pine in the United States. While in western Iowa are found red pines, commonly associated with the desert and high mountain plateaus of the far west.

Many other states doubtless could provide equally good attractions for parks at home and that is what the National Conference on Parks Service, is for. Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Park Service, will be here to discuss the work of the National Parks, while others will tell of state park work, notably Dr. J. H. Pammel, chairman of the Iowa Conservation Board, who will explain how Iowa surmounted its difficulties.

STATE HAS HIGH HEALTH RECORD

Mortality in Wisconsin Steadily Decreased Last Two Years

Madison.—Mortality in Wisconsin has steadily decreased during the past two years, with infant death rate establishing a noteworthy record, the biennial report of the State Board of Health states.

Wisconsin stood as ranking sixth among the states in the birth registration area, with an infant mortality of 80 in 1,000 births, the report shows. In 1919, the death rate from tuberculosis was 50 for each 100,000 of population, while in 1920 it was 47.8. In 1918, the last year for which comparative figures are available, the rate stood fifth in the union for its low mortality rate from tuberculosis, being bettered by Utah, Kansas, Washington, and Oregon. Wisconsin leads all states in the measure of her success in combating the spread of tuberculosis, the report reveals.

Diphtheria Causes Most Deaths.—Twenty-four deaths from all communicable diseases in 1920 were reported to have been only one half of the number in 1919. Communicable diseases were declared to have resulted in fewer deaths than in any other states except for infantile paralysis and scarlet fever. Diphtheria was the only disease which caused more deaths in 1920 than in 1919. The principal communicable diseases which the department is combating are meningitis, diphtheria, measles, poliomyelitis, scarlet fever, smallpox, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, and whooping cough. During the past year a fall in the death rate from 14.6 per 10,000 to 12.1 has been noted.

In order of magnitude, influenza headed the list of communicable diseases in 1918 and 1919, although the rate was lower in 1920. In 1918 there were 7,666 reported cases in Wisconsin, with a death rate of 27.5 per 10,000 population. The 1919 epidemic resulted in 2,200 cases and a death rate of 8.7 per 10,000.

Measles Not Alarming Here.—Measles was declared to be a less destructive enemy in Wisconsin than in other states. While the death rate for diphtheria was said to have been the lowest recorded in ten years, the department said concentrated effort would be made to secure a still further reduction.

Infantile Paralysis showed a higher death rate in Wisconsin than for other states. Sources reported showed the mounting fatality. Smallpox as a cause of death has almost disappeared the figures show. Only five fatal cases were recorded in 1919, although there were 62 cases of the disease. Universal vaccination was declared to be only way to combat its spread.

Clear up Typhoid Fever.—Wisconsin's record in clearing up typhoid fever was said to be a notable achievement. In 1919, there were 2,446 cases reported resulting in 553 deaths, which gave the state a mortality rate of 24 per 100,000. In 1920 there were 225 cases and 24 deaths, with a mortality rate of 10.5 per 100,000 population.

LYNAUGH TO TAKE STAND ON MONDAY

To recount any remarks, fears or doubts of the student crowd.
"Were there any threats?" pressed the attorney.
"I do not remember," replied the witness.
"Do you remember that before Lynaugh stopped, there were remarks from the students of 'He won't shoot'?" said the witness.
In his opening testimony Redderson told of hearing students on the porch of the fraternity house where Lynaugh arrested Lynaugh, warning the student to change his sweater "because the officer could recognize him."

Patrolman Threatens Lynaugh

He also swore he heard the patrolman say to Lynaugh at the moment of the arrest: "You think you are smart—you're in good luck that I didn't get a shot at you."
Charles Rohr, student, from Burlington, Wis., was recalled to the stand this morning. This witness swore he saw Lynaugh kick Jandorf two times, and also that the patrolman hit the student three times. He is the only witness thus far to testify that Lynaugh either kicked or hit Jandorf more than once.
"I do remember a wild report going up among the students joining in the following of the patrolman to this effect: 'He'll use that gun to protect himself.' This statement was drawn out of Rohr after the defending attorney closely examined him on previous testimony given at the inquest hearing.

Wanted to Get Out

"I wanted to get out of the crowd for Jandorf was getting loud and there might be trouble," swore the witness when the counsel for the defense cross-examined him on previous statements made at the inquest.

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation
BY MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER XXXIX
JILL TUNNEY

I washed up the dishes and straightened the living room. Helen showed me how to make my nails the week before, and I noticed the improvement in my hands from the first week or so in town. I had been doing but little hard work, and in addition, I had learned how to care for the nails—the little details of creams and pumice and bleaches for stains and other things that most women know and that I could not remember in improving their appearance.

Helen came in later, when her restaurant was closed for the evening. "Your hands are lovely," she said approvingly when I showed her the results of my home-made manicure. "You know, I've a theory that the various parts of our bodies are all connected. If you neglect your hair it falls out; if you don't take care of your skin it shows up; and if your hands aren't treated with proper respect and attention, they grow old before their time."

She held out one of her large, bony hands and examined it. "You have pretty fingers and a nicely shaped hand," she went on. "It is soft and feminine and shows all the sweetness and refinement that you possess. But your hands show my awful common sense and my intensely practical nature."

"Where's the 'V'?" she asked suddenly. I told her.

"What a bad crowd for her to be with," she commented. "They won't affect her, she's too sweet and sane in her point of view. But they will make her unhappy, and they will affect Bud."

Her words increased my own fears. Violet, like most women, had an infinite capacity for sacrifice.

She would give up everything, even her point of view, for the man she loved. Against her instincts and her better judgment, she was accepting the people whom she disliked. How far would her love carry her, against her common sense?

I was to find out that night. For I was so worried over the whole situation that I could not sleep. I was to find out by the reading of a white, enjoining the wonderful luxury of a book and bed and a reading lamp—either would have considered such luxury post-terrestrial. The door into the living room was not quite closed, and the light there was turned low.

Presently I heard them come in. I knew something was wrong. "I mean that, I simply won't go out with those people again," Violet's voice was low and excited. In spite of her agitation, she remembered that I might be asleep and did not want to disturb me.

"But Violet, they're all right. Of course, 'Toss' hasn't any brains, but she's a good dancer and a good little sport."

"She's rude and vulgar and—"

"And Violet, you can't say a word against him. He's put me on all sorts of good things."

"He makes you spend more money than you can."

"He shows me how to make more money too." Bud was trying to be patient, but his voice showed he was losing his temper.

"Don't mean his extravagance. Nor yours, for you can do as you like with your own money. But it hurts me to see you waste it and I don't want you to waste it on me."

"But that wasn't why you broke up the party tonight. What if I did have my own money? I mean, I could guess the strain the girl was under."

"But that wasn't why you broke up the party tonight. What if I did have my own money? I mean, I could guess the strain the girl was under."

But twenty-four hours later, on turning the situation in his mind he had come to the conclusion that there was really no reason for his having run away. He had scraped in some promising shell but taken no pearls. Still the bottom offered possibilities, and he decided to take a chance. So he had beaten back to the "Providence" and building in on the land at night got that beautiful and landed as best he could and started around to the lagoon with the idea of looking up Kavanagh and trying to make some sort of a digger hole in it. Kavanagh really had not the bearing right of the place; or if he had not to arrange for getting them as soon as might be and working to their mutual profit.

And then, on picking his way along the edge of the mole he had been suddenly set upon by a madman as he thought, and shoved over the side. He had seen it in the light of subsequent events and through consideration for the persons involved in the affair he would suggest that this part of the sailing might be a digger hole in it. Kavanagh had been evidently no longer in possession of his wits, and he had acted according to the exigencies of the situation and put him under restraint. The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR JOE:

Tessie the new nurse-girl is no more. I don't mean she's physically dead, I just mean she's known the departed as far as personality is concerned. Her appetite simply knew no limit or it did it refused to recognize it, and the climax was capped this morning when I went around to Stutz's store and Mr. Stutz in handing out my bill, also handed out the remark that I must of had several parties last week.

"I've had one party, Mr. Stutz," I says, "and believe me, I says, 'She's some party'."

In plain black and white, and then I went home and told Tessie in plain black and white that henceforth after this she and I could be nothing more than distant friends. I told her I'd give her a recommendation, and I did, though in order to make it consort with my conscience I underlined the word "healthy" twice.

Mrs. Fink made a suggestion as to why I don't try to get a girl fresh from the other side, and quick as a wink I says, "No thank you, Mrs. Fink. I says, 'The girls on this side are plenty fresh enough.' It was a good patriotic answer to make, wasn't it Joe?"

"Well, maybe so," she says—one reason why it borders on the impossible to keep Mrs. Fink at an argument is because she refuses to stop talking—maybe so, she says, "but if you go after a German girl you'll be just as liable as not to get a former German princess or the wife of some former count or duke or something. I understand all the titled nobility are going out to service now to keep from starving in the grave," she says.

Well, even if there's so Joe, I believe in democracy and if the upshot classes of Europe can't survive without my assistance why so much the worse for them. And besides in the bargain, when I think of the rare and impossible foods that even a common ordinary hot polli nurse-girl demands to eat, why my mind almost turns gray when I stop to consider what an ex-princess or even a markess would expect. Well, olive oil.

GRANDMOTHER'S HELPS
When Cooking Fish—The smell of fish often lingers in a pan in which it has been cooked and is very disagreeable. If the pan is filled with water to which two or three table-spoons of vinegar have been added, and is allowed to stand, or better, to boil a minute or two before washing, the odor will quickly disappear.

Fruit Cornstarch Pudding—Two cups of milk, one-half cup cornstarch, stir to dissolve and add one-half cup sugar, one cup of any prepared fruit, cut in bits. Cook for five minutes and then add a pinch of salt and one teaspoon of vanilla. Beat to mix and then mix in custard cups. Turn in the mixture and then chill. Use equal parts of banana and sliced orange.

Boat Salad—Cook three medium beets, skin, cool, scoop out the inside and add one-half cup chopped cabbage and one-quarter cup diced celery, mix with mayonnaise, refill the beet shells. Serve on shredded lettuce.

Indian Pudding—Five cups scalded milk, one-third cup cornmeal, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon ginger. Pour milk slowly on meal, cook in double boiler 20 minutes, add molasses, salt and ginger; pour into buttered pudding dish and bake two hours in slow oven with water in pan. It cooked too rapidly it will whey. Ginger may be omitted.

Caramels—One-half cup molasses, one cup sugar, butter size of an egg, one-half cup milk, one large tablespoon flour, one-quarter pound chocolate. Mix sugar and flour, add other ingredients and boil until mixture will form a hard ball when dropped in cold water. Turn into a buttered pan and cut in squares.

Panache—One pound brown sugar, two pounds English walnuts (broken), one cup milk, butter half the size of an egg, mix ingredients and boil until syrup threads from a spoon. Remove from stove, add nuts, and vanilla, beat until it creams, pour in buttered pans and cut in squares.

Ice Cream Candy—Three cups of sugar, one-quarter teaspoon cream tartar, one-half teaspoon vinegar, one-half cup hot water. Boil mixture together until mixture will become brittle when dropped in cold water. Remove from fire, stir in one-half teaspoon baking soda, cool in buttered pan sufficiently to pull. Pull and cut, using scissors or a sharp knife.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young married woman and have not lived in this town long. Certain women from the church I attend have called and are doing everything to make me feel that I do not like it and am happy in all except one way.

We live in an apartment on the second floor. After we had been here two weeks the women in the apartment next door told me that the lady below was telling everyone I had stolen her tea towels. I have been unjustly accused of stealing things in my life, but I certainly have never been accused of stealing before.

You can't imagine how I felt when I heard about it. I thanked the woman next door for telling me and I assured her that the other woman was mistaken. I cried all the afternoon and thought I could not wait until my husband got home.

He came and he was so angry that I didn't know what he would do to the woman. We decided to call on her and talk over. When we got down to her apartment we found she was not at home. Later we learned that she was away for two weeks.

At the end of the two weeks I saw the woman was home and so I called on her. She said it was very strange about the towels, because she recognized them as her own as soon as she saw them on my line and so she took two of them down.

She brought out an armful of linen tea towels and showed me. I told her that it was not unreasonable that we should have the same kind as long as they were so plain and ordinary. I have seen the same thing in the homes of almost all of my friends. Then I showed her my towels which were like hers.

She said she was sorry such a thing happened, but she felt it was a natural thing for her to assume. I told her I wanted my towels back and she gave them to me, but she was very angry when she told me and acted as if I were in the wrong.

What can I do to right myself with my neighbors? It is a terrible thing to be accused of being a thief.

It is a terrible thing for an honorable woman to be accused of being a thief, but at the same time it is a ridiculous thing. You might tell the woman next door the outcome of your talk to the woman, and let it go at that. Do as kind as you can in what you say about the woman who took your towels. If you are more apt to get sympathy than if you are resentful.

In a few weeks the matter will have passed over. Your reputation has not been ruined with your neighbors. If your next-door neighbor knows the truth about the matter, and if she likes you, she will do all in her power to right the matter and it will not be necessary for you to thank her or do anything about it.

Oshkosh.—An epidemic of Measles, grippe and influenza is prevailing. Physicians are treating over 20 patients afflicted with the measles. The Rev. G. J. Perry, pastor of the Welsh Presbyterian church, started to preach early Saturday morning and efforts to stop the violent paroxysms have thus far failed.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

An Unfortunate Necessity
"Dear Mrs. Page—Will you please tell me whether it is all right for a lady making her home at a hotel and having a living room in connection with her bedroom apartment to entertain her business guests and gentlemen friends there, or must she entertain them in the parlor of the hotel?"—M. M. B.

Your suite of rooms in your home and so you have a right to entertain your friends there, if you wish. But of course, being in a hotel you must be extremely careful of appearances, if you would avoid unpleasant comment. It depends so much upon your age and your general conduct and the type of men with whom you make friends, whether you are safe in this rather difficult situation. It seems to me unfortunate that you must live alone in a hotel, but since you do you must learn over backwards just a little in trying to stand up straight for Mrs. Grundy. If I were you I would suggest to your friends that because you are living in a hotel you prefer to have them call very early and leave early.

It's Harmless Anyway
"Dear Mrs. Page—I have been trying to write stories and photographs for the last year. My relatives say it is foolishness and that I can't make anything out of it. I have been told that I have talent. Do you advise me to stop writing or to continue?"—Helpful.

I see no reason why you should drop writing if you enjoy it and can afford it. I think that it can't be possible for you to write anything unless you are devoting time to it that you could put to more profitable uses. And in that case I could not advise you without seeing samples of your work and perhaps not even then. Because, like all arts, writing is a hard taskmaster; it pays well once in a while, and it is always a gamble, with the odds largely against you, whether one will be successful or not. So it comes to depend upon how much the spirit moves you—whether you would rather risk living in a garret and write, or make sure of butter on your bread by getting a regular job with a pay envelope every Saturday night.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Page in care of the "What Shall I Do?" department will be answered in these columns in due time. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or outdoor reply is desired, a stamped and addressed envelope must be enclosed with the questions. —The Editor.

CHAPTER XIX

Coming back to life is far more humbling than leaving it.

In my case the return to consciousness was reluctant to the point of violent protest until my faculties cleared a little more. I discovered End bending over me. She appeared to be kissing me, so I knew I could be certain in my numb condition. She had not seen me open my eyes, nor did she appear to be aware that I was quick again. I wanted to speak to her, but could not. Also I was very cold and as the chill struck deeper into me and I still found myself unable to speak or move I began to wonder if perhaps I might not be really dead.

This condition was augmented as I looked up (for I could not move my head) and discovered from the correlation of spots and rigging that I was lying apparently on a transverse alongside the main companionway, exposed to the dew and apparently uncovered. It was evident that End would never have left me thus exposed unless I was dead and even in that case I was not.

As we pulled along I wondered rather idly why Drake was quitting Trocadero so soon. Was it because the shell was giving out, or because his haul had been so rich that he felt able to afford retiring on what he had already mined and possibly quit the Pacific before there was any loss on his part? It would not take such pearls as I had given Alice to make a man a millionaire. In those days a man's misdeeds in the Pacific were less apt to catch him in a bad part of the world than they would be now and by clearing out in time it was probable that Drake would be able to make some port like Fiji or Australia for what she would bring and lose himself in the wide world before ever any effort was made to lay him by the heels.

It was nearly dark and the sides of the mole were plunged in deep purple shadows while the still water of the lagoon shone as though there were a light coming up from beneath. Looking toward the bunkhouse I could see a white figure in one of our homemade chairs on the veranda. Drake, following my gaze, gave a short laugh.

"She'll be so lonely tomorrow night," said he.

We were then almost alongside and he was about to give the orders "in order" when from behind the bulkheads of the Mackerel rose what looked to my bewildered senses like a row of big, black balls with a singular white one at the end. It was most extraordinary. They popped up like puppets in a life-sized Punch and Judy show, as though impelled by some guiding force from beneath. With their amazing appearance came a scraping, guttural sound—and here were eight rifles shoved out at us in the same automatic procession, and seven stacks of them were planted against the big shoulders of Charley Joliar and his warriors while End's cheek cuddled the eighth.

So singular was this spectacle, so bizarre and utterly unexpected that it smote my tottering senses as over-poweringly humors. Those heads poking up in that absurd outrageous way, the rifles leveled with the precision of some silly mechanical toy; Drake's startled oath as he thrust his big bulk backward, and the snarled, astonished blasphemies from the lagoon's crew. It was too much for me. I had seen as usual as I thought I could not have opened my eyes, or having done so, shut them again.

But they were open now and strangely acute. I could see the stars more clearly and distinctly than ever before, and I was admiring the flaming and colored scintillations of a large one which was quite low and trying to identify it when it became threatened with collapse by some bulky, grotesque body which appeared to be mounting with considerable rapidity. Presently this somber shape stopped mounting, and as I continued to regard it with intense curiosity it stopped heaving also, and seemed to hang very limp, just below the main cross-trees.

I asked the doctor first. I thought maybe "twas some kind of a disease, and if he knew it was coming, he could give them some sort of a medicine to keep it away—like being vaccinated so's not to have smallpox, you know. And I told him so.

"He gave a funny little laugh, that somehow didn't sound like a laugh at all. Then he grew very, very sober, and said:

"I'm sorry, little girl, but I'm afraid I haven't got any medicine that will prevent a divorce. If I did have, there'd be no going to bed, drinking, or sleeping, for me, I'm thinking 'd be so busy answering my calls."

"Then it is a disease," I cried. And I can remember just how frightened I felt. "But isn't there any doctor anywhere that can stop it?"

He shook his head and gave that queer little laugh again.

"I'm afraid not," he sighed. "As for it being a disease—there are people that call it a disease, and there are others who call it a sin, and there are still others who say it's a remedy worse than the disease it tries to cure. But there, you baby! What am I saying? Come, come, my dear, just forget it. It's nothing you should bother your little head over now. Wait till you're older."

"I'll be older, indeed? How I hate to have folks talk to me like that! And they do it all the time. As if I was a child now, when I'm almost standing there where the brook and river meet!"

But that was just the kind of talk I got everywhere, nearly every time I asked anyone who a divorce was. Some laughed, and some sighed. Some looked real worried 'cause I'd asked it, and one got mad. (That was the dressmaker. I found out afterward that she'd had a divorce since, so probably she thought I asked the question on purpose to plague her.) But nobody would answer me—really answer me—and so I'd know what it meant; and I'd know everybody said, "Run away, so 'd you shouldn't talk of such things," or, "Wait, my dear, till you're older," and all that kind of thing.

Oh, how I longed to know something! How do they expect us to get our education if they won't answer our questions?

"Don't know which made me angrier, I mean angrier. (I'm speaking of two things; so I must, I suppose. I hate grammar!) To have them talk like that—not answer me, you know—and to tell me to run away, or "You shouldn't talk of such things," or, "Wait, my dear, till you're older," and all that kind of thing.

It was one day when I was in this buying some white bread for Nurse Sarah, and it was a little while after I had asked the doctor about a divorce. Somebody had said something that made me think you could buy divorces, and I suddenly determined to ask Mr. Jones if he had them for sale. Of course, all I had then for sale was my curiosity, and I knew that a divorce is very simple and very common. It's just like a marriage certificate, only it unmarries you instead of marrying you, and I didn't know it then. And I'm going to tell this story I've got to tell it just as it happened, (of course.)

Well, I asked Mr. Jones if he had them for sale, and he he and them for sale, and he he and them for sale. There were six of them sitting around the stove behind me.

"Oh, yes, my little maid" (above all lines, and to be called a little maid) one of them cried. "You can buy them if you've got money enough; but I don't reckon our friend Jones here has got them for sale."

Then they all laughed again, and winked at each other. (That's another disgusting thing—winks, when you ask a perfectly civil question! But what can you do? They winked and began to tell me what a divorce really was. I can't remember them all, but I can some of them. Of course I understand now that these men were trying to be smart.

MONTICELLO BOY DIES FROM FALL FROM BARN

From Gazette Correspondent.

Monroe—A fall from a hay mow was fatal to Chester, 4 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Freitag, at Monticello, Monday. The little boy had come up into the hay mow to throw the hay down the chute and fell through striking his head on the cement floor. He never regained consciousness. Funeral was held Thursday afternoon at Monticello. He is survived by his parents, and four brothers and five sisters.

Smallpox Closes School

Four cases have been discovered in Monroe in the past two days and the utmost precautions to prevent an epidemic is being taken. An investigation made of the 460 pupils in the high school showed that only 65 had ever been vaccinated. There is no post house at Monroe for the isolation of patients.

Hold Annual Meeting

Members of the Clarno Mutual Fire Insurance company held their annual meeting today to increase the fire risk from $3,000 to $5,000 and re-elect officers for 1921. The maximum risk was placed at $5,000 when the building was insured for a maximum of $10,000. Officers are George Eaton, president; J. A. Hoffman, secretary; and Joshua Klayser, Sr., treasurer.

POSTAL SAVINGS GROW IN 10 YEARS; NEW CARDS ISSUED

The government has issued a new postal savings card to take the place of the one now in use on the tenth anniversary of the establishment of the postal savings system, according to information from Postmaster J. J. Cunningham.

The new card will be furnished free of cost and when ten 10-cent postal savings stamps have been affixed to it, it will be accepted at any depository office as a deposit of $1, or it may be redeemed in cash. The outstanding feature of the new card is the translation into 24 foreign languages of the statement that the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of deposits.

The service was first established at 48 post offices, one in each state on January 1, 1911, and, although hampered by many restrictions as to rate of interest and maximum amount allowed on deposit, it has shown remarkable progress. The amount on deposit today is more than $12,000,000 and its depositors have long since passed the one-half million mark.

Many banks, usually savings banks, prior to the establishment of the system, felt that the postal savings system would be a strong competitor, but experience has shown that the postal savings system draws its patrons not from depositors in established and well-known banks, but from among those who otherwise would not place their money in any banking institution whatever.

The original act of congress restricted the total amount to be placed on deposit at $500 and the deposit of this amount was limited to not more than $100 per month. Later the monthly limitation was entirely removed and the maximum amount increased first to $1,000 and then to the present amount, $2,500. Postmaster General Burleson, in the annual report just submitted to congress, recommends increasing the rate of interest to be paid depositors and action by congress will, no doubt, be taken along these lines within the near future.

RURAL PUPILS SIGN UP FOR RED CROSS

Reports from the country schools on the campaign for the Junior Red Cross are now being received by County Superintendent of Schools O. D. Antisdel. Many of the schools have a 100 per cent membership.

Under the new arrangement reached by Superintendent Antisdel the money received will be used in the schools where the funds are raised.

F. E. Converse, superintendent of the city schools in Beloit, today communicated with Mr. Antisdel over the disposal of Red Cross money raised in the Beloit district. It is intended that the money obtained be returned to the districts to be used by them in school work.

Absence of Snow Proves Disastrous for Winter Wheat

Winter wheat in Rock county has suffered considerably from the open weather. Rice which was planted in rather limited acreage is surviving the freezing and thawing much better than the wheat planted during the fall.

Farmers who have wheat planted in an unprotected field are now planning to reseed the fields for new crops this spring. Fields which were thoroughly mulched with fertilizer or straw are not in a serious condition. A heavy fall of snow to form a covering over the fields would do much to insure good crops from wheat in which the seed has not been frozen. Most of the wheat growers expect a poor stand, for most all of the fields show some winter effects.

Tobacco has started moving to the city markets during the last two weeks. The buying has been more active and many of the farmers are unloading even at lower prices. The average being paid is decided to be 25 and 8 cents.

International Auto License is Urged

To make foreign travel easier for American tourists, the American Automobile association is negotiating with automobile clubs of other countries for an international license.

The object in obtaining such courtesy is to minimize the inconveniences until now undergone by tourists on entering a foreign country by machine. An arrangement has been consummated with the Automobile association of Great Britain and the touring club of Belgium by which these organizations issue a license to the American tourist for travel in each of these countries. The tourist receives the document before embarking for the other side. The A. A. A. issues it and guarantees the return of the car to the United States.

The co-operation of the United States government is being sought in this movement by an amendment to the Sweet-Pittman bill now before congress. The bill, as it now is worded, provides for recognition by all states of the registration license issued by one another.

SALESMEN ARRIVE AS HARBINGERS OF BRIGHTER DAYS

Considerable increase in the number of traveling salesmen making seasonal calls here has been noted since the first of the year. At one of the local hotels alone, 15 were registered yesterday, where before the holidays there was only one now and then.

Use of the sample rooms of the hotels by men who carry their wares in trunks is particularly more prevalent. Representatives of women's ready-to-wear apparel, dry goods and shoe houses are most noticeable.

Local hotels are experiencing an awakening in transient guests. The first four days of each week according to information gathered, the hotels are generally filled. Salesmen and other business men are in greatest numbers.

"This increase in the number of salesmen, would seem to me to indicate an attempt by the manufacturers to open up business again," said L. O. Hoffman, manager of the local Chamber of Commerce when approached on the matter. "It looks good for the future."

Those salesmen who come to Janesville prior to the holidays were those who carried their samples in handbags.

SALESMEN ARRIVE AS HARBINGERS OF BRIGHTER DAYS

Considerable increase in the number of traveling salesmen making seasonal calls here has been noted since the first of the year. At one of the local hotels alone, 15 were registered yesterday, where before the holidays there was only one now and then.

Use of the sample rooms of the hotels by men who carry their wares in trunks is particularly more prevalent. Representatives of women's ready-to-wear apparel, dry goods and shoe houses are most noticeable.

Local hotels are experiencing an awakening in transient guests. The first four days of each week according to information gathered, the hotels are generally filled. Salesmen and other business men are in greatest numbers.

"This increase in the number of salesmen, would seem to me to indicate an attempt by the manufacturers to open up business again," said L. O. Hoffman, manager of the local Chamber of Commerce when approached on the matter. "It looks good for the future."

Those salesmen who come to Janesville prior to the holidays were those who carried their samples in handbags.
